

TORONTO, Ontario (January 25, 2010) – Lumira Capital, a leading health and life sciences venture capital firm announced today the promotion of Jack Jenuth to Principal.

In his new role Jack will be responsible for leading the activities of the analytics and industry intelligence group at Lumira, providing industry specific insight into areas the firm is proactively looking to invest, creating financial models, performing due diligence, and assisting with the needs of Lumira's Portfolio companies. Jack will also have responsibility for sourcing deals focused mainly in Canada and structuring deal terms.

"Jack took on the role of Senior Analyst two and a half years ago and we've been extremely pleased with the material contributions that Jack has made to the firm over that period" said Peter van der Velden, president and CEO. "Jack is a terrific member of the team and we know he will accelerate in his new role".

Prior to joining Lumira Capital, Jack worked at Base4 and Open Text Inc. where he developed, sold and provided support for enterprise content management solutions targeted to the biotechnology and pharmaceutical industry in North America and Europe. Jack earned a PhD in biochemistry and molecular biology from the University of Calgary, Alberta, followed by post-doctoral studies at the Montréal Neurological Institute and McGill University, both in Québec, and completed his BSc in cellular, molecular and microbial biology – also at the University of Calgary.
